The Zellerweg am schwarzen Herrgott is located at the beginning of the Zellertal Basin, which opens a few kilometers further east and concludes with the Frauenberg. Here as there, the pure limestone background prevails. The main difference is made by the microclimatic events. While the Frauenberg is characterized by the open, exposed location and wind evasions, the Zellerweg am schwarzen Heggott is located on a steep narrow edge of the fracture, which once again protects the situation from rain and the full severity of light infall.

The Zellerweg am schwarzen Herrgott is one of the oldest and most famous vineyards in Germany (mentioned as a vineyard as early as the 8th century), but has been forgotten for decades. In the middle of the Zellerweg am schwarzen Herrgott runs the border between Rhine Hesse and the northern Palatinate. With the 2010 vintage, we revived this grandiose vineyard with a wine that also is great.

The precision produced by the Riesling here is unique even among the barren limestone slagues of Wonnegau. Nothing serves or is an accessory, everything is just about itself. At the same time, the wine combines spicy stone aromas with light floating elegance. The piquant nose of iodine and minerals is played around by understated white fruit notes such as yellow plum and ripe quince. The crisp stallingly stoothed, razor-sharp hissed minerality on the palate underscores the unexcited aroma game that only great wines possess. This goes beyond Riesling, reminiscent of the great wines from Meursault, and yet: Only Riesling can do that.
