In 2006 we returned to naming our Village Wines after the most-famous wine villages in Rhine Hessen, which is also the location of our greatest acreage.

We believe, however, that Nackenheim has something which is known today as terroir. Success has proven our point. Nackenheim lies at the northern end of the famous Red Slope. Its steep gradient and southeasterly exposure ensure that the grapes profit from the morning sunlight, which is also reflected by the Rhine River. Nightly dew can dry quickly, helping grapes remain healthy on the vines into November.

Our Village Wines reflect all those characteristics for which Rhine wines were so long famous: powerful body of sweet Riesling grapes. Stony, yet porous shale releases the wine and gives it density and polish. In comparison to our wines of Nierstein, our wines of Nackenheim have a reserved fruitiness but a stony spiciness. Aromas of sweet, ripe apricot, spicy gooseberry and a subtle note of fresh green herbs. In the mouth, the wine reveals a mixture of mature, smooth creaminess, and challenging minerality that completely coats the palate.
